Lena Schmidt of Dudley, Tex., Writes a Letter About Cardui Having Helped Her.

Dudley, Tex.—"You may use this letter in your advertising, if you like," writes Mrs. Lena Schmidt of this place. "A few years ago, I suffered every month, but after taking one bottle of Cardui, I was relieved right away."

"Cardui has surely done me a sight of good. It brought me back to my health. I am now strong and well, and feel better than in years, and am doing all my housework."

Every woman needs a tonic, to take when she feels like a miserable, sick, weak, under the weather.

The tonic to take at such a time is Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is also a medicine. For pain and discomfort, due to female ailments, no medicine is so good as Cardui.

The main ingredients of Cardui are imported direct from Europe, especially for this one woman's medicine and tonic, and are not for sale at ordinary drug stores.

Cardui acts specifically on the woman's organs, preventing unnecessary pain and building up womanly strength.

Try it for your troubles. It will certainly help you.

HE SLEW SEVEN NOW HE MUST DIE

SUPREME COURT SAYS NO TO BUCHANAN MURDERERS.

BLAMES FAIR SEX

Denies Heinous Crime That Shocked Southwest Virginia, But Admits He Was Something of a Don Juan—Giant in Figure.

RICHMOND, VA.—Special.—Unless Governor Swannow sees fit to interfere, Howard Little, "the sextuple murderer," of Buchanan county, will die in the electric chair at the State penitentiary on the morning of February 11th.

This fact became known today when it was announced that the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals had refused to allow the prisoner a writ of error.

The action of the appellate tribunal shuts off all hope for Little, and he is now left behind the bars, where he is held in the awful fate that awaits him. So far as courage is concerned, he is holding up pretty well, though he is far from cheerful.

When his attorney and Policeman "Long Tom" Haines, of the Capitol constabulary, called to break the terrible news to the prisoner, he remarked that he would rather die than serve a life term behind the bars.

Little expressed some anxiety about the disposition of his body. He wants his corpse to rest under the sod of the McDevall county, W. Va., and the $51 he has at his disposal is being reserved to further this end.

Has Killed Seven.

Strictly speaking, it is inaccurate to apply the term "sextuple murderer" to Little. To be absolutely accurate, he should be called a "septuple murderer," for the deed Mrs. Betty Justice and George Meadows and his family, were not the only people he has killed.

Little slew a man of the name of George McKenney atorton, W. Va., and was sent to prison for life. According to information received here, for that offense, the Governor pardoned him. For that offense, the Governor pardoned him.

This deep-dyed criminal with the bloody record behind him, is a picturesque character, though he does not look like a desperado. He is superbly built and tips the scales at something like 235 pounds. One of his eyes is smaller than the other and this gives him a bellicose air. To quote the words of "Long Tom" Haines, he "would be a bad fellow to turn loose in a crowd if he got mad."

Was Fond of "Gentle" Men. If the reminiscences of condemned men may ever be used to point a moral or adorn a tale, the remarks of Little as to his own career may serve a good purpose with those whose weakness is women.

The "sextuple murderer," in discussing the case of Little with his attorney and the amiable "Long Tom" Haines, declared that the "eternal feminine" had been his ruin. He has been a kind of buccar Don Juan, and this, too, despite the fact that he has a wife and several children.

His first scrape was attributable to a quarrel about a woman, and his second and more atrocious offense also involved a female of no enviable reputation. Indeed, it was a person of this sort who gave the most damaging testimony against him.

Little does not desire his wife to come to Richmond before he "goes through the door." He cannot bear the thought of seeing her. Close friends to fight out his few remaining hours alone in his death cell. It is hardly probable that the victim's physical condition before the day of execution comes, or he is the product of a section where men, though sometimes brutal, are for the most part patient.

It would be difficult, however, to conceive of a more monstrous or remorseless homicide than that which has sent Little to the Virginia penitentiary. His murderous hand stayed itself neither in mercy to women nor to children.

Some four months or so ago the home of Mrs. Betty Justice and of five children at Huxley, Buchanan county, was located at Huxley, Buchanan county, was found in ashes one morning. Some of the remains of the dead were scattered about the place. The victim, on almost every side. The various postures—a fact which told the terrible struggles some of them had made to save themselves—were observed and that some had been shot and that others had been hit with a knife or a hatchet. The bodies, perhaps, were left to the flames. At any rate, all perished.

For the Motive. The county officials were quick to begin an investigation, and it did not take long for them to find that the incendiary had put a torch to the house, and that some of its inmates had been killed. The investigation was attempted to make their escape.

Robbery was the motive for the sextuple homicide. It was known that the ill-fated family had a good deal of money in the house, and Little afterwards had been seen with a bag of money that he intended to leave Virginia for good with his paramour.

At one time there was much talk of lynching the accused, but better judgment prevailed, especially as he was quickly convicted and then sent to Roanoke for safe keeping.

Originally the man was sentenced to go to the chair January 7th, but the executive respite him in order that the case might go to the Court of Appeals. The trial of the case was announced that the trial of the lower court was a fair one.

Little vigorously denies that he is guilty.

MEAT ISSUES VERY DEFIANT

Swift and Company Issues Order to Branch Managers.

BOSTON, MASS.—Special.—The beginning of the boycott in Boston today finds the meat trust in its old position of disregard for public sentiment. In a confidential circular to its agents, the Swift Company has issued orders that the agitation for lower prices shall be disregarded and the instruction is given that the various meats shall be sold for every cent that it is possible to get.

The text of the circular follows: Swift & Co., Central Office, 84 North Market Street, Boston, January 28, 1910:

Branch House Managers.—Do not want you to be at all influenced by present newspaper agitation regarding the beef situation. Please don't make any talk about same whatever, but keep moving right along and sell what both sheep and lambs you have shipped for every cent it is possible to obtain. Shipments are costing high, and Swift & Co. are very insistent that house show reasonable results. Do not believe that present conditions are anything that will change. We believe that there will be improved demand next week and improved prices to go with it.

Your respectfully, Yours respectfully, SWIFT & CO.

The initials A. T. H. are under the name of Swift & Co., and these initials are said to stand for the name of A. T. Hunnewell, the Boston general manager.

GIRL 15, BOY 18, TAKE POISON TOGETHER

DES MOINES.—Special.—A loveless girl of fifteen years, Miss Lina Ammer, and her devoted suitor, Verne Burr, scarcely eighteen years, were so melancholic they could not marry that together they took their lives Thursday. They left these brief, sad notes: "We have decided to die together. Goodbye to everyone. 'LINA'."

"We are unhappy and do not care to live any longer. Do not worry about us; we will go along all right. Goodbye everyone. 'VERNE'."

Their fathers, prosperous farmers at Monroe, a few miles from here, will not admit it, but it is supposed they forbade the children's marriage because of their youth.

Young Burr drove to his sweetheart's home Wednesday night and took her to a dance. On the way, the dance seemed happier than the youthful pair. Smiling and whispering, they danced together constantly. They were usually the few couples left for the night at 2 o'clock Thursday morning.

A very few hours later Burr's father and brother went to their barnyard. There in the bushes in which Verne Burr had driven Miss Ammer to the dance were both dead. A bottle which contained a little of a strong odor of cyanide lay near the carriage. Their fatherly workmen had scribbled in the dark, were in Burr's pocket.

The police department of this city has been notified by the Chief of Police of Chicago to look out for one John B. Robinson, a negro, who stands charged with the murder of Jennie Cleghorn, a young white woman.

The murder is said to have been one of the most brutal and atrocious ever committed in that city. Further details of the homicide case regarding the protection of merchants from dead beats and swindlers of all sorts, who have been preying on merchants for a long time and who have been able to escape prosecution by reason of the imperfections of the law and inability to reach them.

The outline of the bills was given in The Evening Journal yesterday, and are designed to put an end to the worthless check business, the refusal to return or pay for goods when ordered sent for examination by law, and the hearing was quite routine, and the committee deferred action till a later date.

In placing the maker of a worthless check, who refuses to make good upon being notified of the worthless check, in the same category of a person who defrauds or commits theft in any other manner, a boon will be conferred on practically every merchant in Virginia, for who has not suffered by the sharp practices of this particular class of gentry.

The advantages of such a law, as stated, are: It would practically certify all checks. It would enable a merchant to take checks from parties with whose financial circumstances he may be unfamiliar without the usual formalities of references, etc., which often are not available without delay, even with parties entirely responsible, thus enacting a mutual benefit to both parties to the transaction.

It would protect the credulous merchant or confiding friend from loss by knaves who give checks knowing them to be worthless and intending that they ever shall become a form of larceny or fraud never yet effectually covered by any statute in this State.

It would proposed law in its workings would not make it obligatory on a victim to prosecute—merely possible to do so for their recovery and protection. It will put the bad check maker on a par with the thief, and those indulging in the other forms of theft or fraud—prosecution in those cases being not obligatory.

Should a person unconsciously overdraw his bank account, which is frequently the case with very worthy individuals, they would merely have to make good upon application being made to the bank. The law would be effective only as against such persons who refused to make proper provision for their checks before being notified of their dishonor at bank.

M. Umstadter, of Norfolk, president of the association, advocated the bills from a standpoint of public honesty and protection to business men. Charles T. Norman, of Richmond, showed that a civil suit will not always remedy the case, and that making certain offenses criminal would result in making a check being practically certified when given.

Samuel Cohen, of Richmond, also spoke on the necessity of protection for the merchant. John N. Seabell, Jr., of Norfolk, representing the Credit Men's Association and Confederation of Merchants' Association of Norfolk, went into the details of the law and suggested many valuable changes.

Edward Eigenbrun, of Petersburg; W. H. Warner, of Lynchburg; W. O. Clarke, Jr., of Richmond; and L. O. Miller, of Richmond, also pointed out defects that the law ought to remedy. Police Commissioner Christopher Manning, Jr., pointed out that there are many cases of larceny under the conditions outlined by the merchants that the law did not reach. Action will be taken later by the committee on the bills.

ESTRADA'S TROOPS DEFEAT MADRID ARMY AT ACOYAPA.

BLUEFIELDS.—Special.—That General Chamorro has decisively defeated Madrid's troops under General Vasquez, at Acoyapa, in a battle that has continued since Wednesday, is the definite news received here from Rama Friday night, confirming the previous dispatches.

Little of the details of the battle is known, owing to the difficulty of telegraphic transmission between Rama and Acoyapa. General Chamorro has been wounded, but not fatally.

He led the charge on the Madrid troops midway between Acoyapa and Rama. Hand-to-hand fighting for a great distance along the line ensued. The losses must have been fierce, for General Estrada's message says: "Re-
